

MAJOR IN PHILOSOPHY

Requirements

The Philosophy major requires completion of 36 units within a chosen course of study.¹ The standard philosophy major requires study in the history of philosophy, non-western philosophy, theoretical philosophy, logic, and ethics.

Alternatively, students can pursue a course of study that emphasizes social justice. This optional track retains requirements in logic, history, and non-western philosophy, expands requirements in ethics and social/political philosophy, and includes an interdisciplinary component.

Departmental Honors Program

The Department of Philosophy & Religious Studies offers a departmental honors program for students who demonstrate exemplary abilities in philosophy. Students pursuing this option are required to complete PHIL 498 with a minimum grade of A-. Completion of PHIL 498 requires students to produce and defend a 15-20 page paper presenting substantial research in philosophy.

Applicants for departmental honors must have earned 75 units with a minimum 3.50 cumulative GPA, including 18 units in Philosophy courses. In addition, applicants must find a faculty adviser to guide the thesis research and evaluate the final paper and thesis defense. Departmental honors will be posted to the transcript shortly after the bachelor's degree is conferred.

To apply for departmental honors, students must complete an application with the department. Students who wish to take PHIL 498 in the Fall term should apply during the previous spring by March 1st. Students who wish to take PHIL 498 in the Spring term should apply during the previous Fall by Oct. 1st.
